

RIGS FOR A YACHT

Nautical Things That Make Newport Interesting.

WHAT SUMMER GIRL WEARS

When She Wheels or Rides—Costumes in the Casino—Shell Pink, Blue and Cream—Pretty Dresses.

The summer capital has filled up amazingly the past week, and the dress-makers and milliners and jewelers and ministers to luxurious tastes of all descriptions who flock here from New York and even from Paris at the beginning of the season are busy and apparently happy.

The air is full of the scent of roses. The cottage verandas are wreathed with them, and the great pink, crimson and white dewy-hearted blossoms make the early morning hours before Newport fashions are stirring sweet and alluring.

The yachting contingent have at present much to say. Commander Gerry's Electra, Cornelius Vanderbilt's great English yacht Conqueror, W. K. Vanderbilt's Alva and Mr. Parks' Sultana have all been riding in the harbor together within a few days. On board the Electra a yachting breakfast was given a day or two ago, which was the prettiest festivity yet of the season. Decked from stem to stern with bunting, the big, beautiful boat received her visitors. The flower-heaped tables were spread on deck under blue and white awnings, and there was a great flourish of nautical coats and caps by dainty ladies, who would never venture out of harbor in any but the midsummer summer brocade. A pretty girl with Mrs. Eliza Dyer, Jr. wore the prettiest frock of the occasion; it was not a seagreen gown, but had just the faintest possible salt water flavor, with its short, cream-colored Bedford cord skirt striped in faint lines of navy blue, its cream-colored jacket of soft English cloth and its cool shirt waist of navy blue silk, plaited, briar-stitched and fastened with tiny gold buttons. There was a narrow cord and anchor embroidery in gold about the jacket, and the low-crowned, rather broad-brimmed sailor hat was navy blue with striped blue and white ribbons.

Mrs. Dyer herself wore a bodice skirt of blue summer silk, with white polka dots and flounced with white. The back was draped and fastened, after a fashion much in vogue at Newport, to the bodice with a bow and long ends. The full waist had white revers and opened over a shirt of white India; the upper part of the sleeves was blue, with white from the elbow, and with an enormous bunch of daisies at the belt and a blue straw hat with white trimmings, the outfit was as piquant as possible.

You might see, bending over the rail, a pink baskie frock with crimson velvet girdle neck of white India, dotted with red and trimmed with narrow black velvet bands. Here was a red straw hat loaded with field poppies and passed through it tying upon the skirt low down. A big, flat hat of cream-colored crinoline was tied up with cream and pink ribbons.

A young girl who is visiting at the Wetmore establishment quite bore off the honors for Wednesday. Her dress was a pale yellow crepon broadened with a pale blue velvet ribbon. The full corsege was cut in a V, with a corselet of blue, bordered with guipure over blue velvet; the left side of the skirt was lifted and looped over an underdirt with guipure band. Puffed sleeves were banded with lace, and her flapping Leghorn hat was trimmed with bachelor's buttons and blue ribbons.

A pretty young southerner, who promises to be one of the belles of the season, wore a grayish blue baptiste dress this morning as admirable as anything I have yet seen. The skirt had a narrow gathered ruffle, headed by lace and rows of narrow blue velvet ribbon. The corsege was laid in plaits and fastened on one side with velvet bows. Above this came a quaint, full drape of the baptiste, caught down in a V in front over lace threaded with velvet ribbon. A blue and gray Japanese fan was an integral part of this toilet, and added to its attractions.

There is not much to say about evening dresses yet, though the dance will soon be in full swing. Simple white India will come out at the informal entertainments or organdies of delicate tints and trimmed with ribbons. There was on exhibition recently at one of the famous mollusks a briar rose silk frock that indicates what we're coming to in a week or so. It was figured with tiny, delicate maidenhair fern fronds, and its draperies were looped with ribbons of the rich brown of the fern stem. It had creamy lace at throat and sleeves and was the very embodiment of June.

When the waltz music sounds more decidedly there'll be much to say, even of slippers.

light-haired girl—their to an uncomfortable number of millions—as she sat in the stern of a sturdy crew's skiff, looked almost smothered with the new wrap's collar that reached the tops of her ears, the voluminous skirts, the wide belt and great square pockets and general profusion of stuff and absence of fit.

land wears a Newport girl must put on in good weather and a rippleless sea.

The riding clubs are active, and, curiously enough, Newport quite takes to bicycling. The habits are almost as conventional as in the city, but in a party starting out for laurel one day this week there was hardly one not distinctive enough to be interesting. A blonde Baltimorean in silver gray attracted the most attention. Her perfectly-cut, faultless bodice had black revers and opened over a linen shirt with a black tie. Her high hat so far departed from custom as to include it itself in a long, picturesque white gauze veil. Mounted on a big black horse, she made a "symphony" in gray and white and black well worth noting. Navy blue was the original color, though on the outskirts of the group was a brunette in dark crimson, handsome, not looking and not with profit to be limited.

Wheeling would grow faster among such fashionables as come to Newport if it were more graceful. They're athletic enough, and, in point of fact, in the morning hours young girls and young married women are out by dozens and scores upon their safeties; but a good many keep out of it because they're watched the others riding.

A steel-colored cheviot was the material of the most attractive dress I've seen for bicycling. Its wearer had been after wild roses and came back to the city with two escorts, each with branches of sweetbriar tied to the handle bar. Her plain skirt had a very narrow pink fold run about it at the bottom; the folded skirt opened over a pink percale shirt and a pink and gray four-in-hand tie. She wore a gray cheviot cap and seemed to be finding life more than satisfactory.

Dress at the Casino is noticeable, as toilets at Newport always are, quite as much for perfection of detail as for novelty. Newport, like New York, cares more for rightness than for newness, though it is apt to combine newness and rightness in a manner hardly known elsewhere.

Mrs. George Tiffany wore a pretty dress yesterday of a sheer, shell pink wool, bordered with a cream silk band wrought in pink and silver; the skirt was slashed at regular intervals and a band of black velvet passed in and out to give a touch of decision and piquancy; the bodice came a little below the waist and was bordered with embroidery and more velvet, this latter falling in loops upon the right side. Gathered pieces in the likeness of a bolero jacket fell over the bodice and the back was slashed in a V, the velvet ribbons which passed through it tying upon the skirt low down. A big, flat hat of cream-colored crinoline was tied up with cream and pink ribbons.

Imitators and Impostors.
The unequalled success of Allcock's Porous Plasters as an external remedy has induced numerous parties to offer imitations, which they endeavor to sell on the reputation of Allcock's. It is an absurdity to speak of them in the same category as the genuine porous plaster. Their pretensions are unfounded, their vaunted merit unsupported by facts, their alleged superiority to or equality with Allcock's a false pretense.

The ablest medical practitioners and chemists and thousands of grateful patients unite in declaring Allcock's Porous Plasters the best external remedy ever produced.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

Dullman's German Medicine Co. GENTLEMEN—For over four years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave permanent relief until I took Dullman's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Remedy, and since taking I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it.
